Willow Park Sports Complex Concessions Building Mural, 500 W 700 S

Project Overview

Logan City is seeking submissions from artists/artist teams to create a mural on the central concessions building at the Willow Park Sports Complex. The mural will cover all four walls of the first story of the building. The estimated total area of the mural is 1,092 sf.

Willow Park Sports Complex

The Willow Park Sports Complex, originally called the Quadraplex, is the heart of recreational softball in Logan and an important component of the recreational resources in the city and the Woodruff neighborhood. The park includes four softball fields and is connected to nearby playgrounds, pavilions, open space, a fishing pond, a zoo, fairgrounds, an aquatic center, and a skate park. The greater Willow Park and Cache County Fairgrounds park system constitutes the largest public recreational facility in Logan.

The Sports Complex was built in 1981 and has remained relatively unchanged since then. The most recent improvement came in 2024, when the infield of all four softball fields was refurbished with improved substrate and new backstops. The fields are dominated by iconic rows of poplar trees that cast long shadows across the fields in the evenings. The central concessions building was also built in 1981 and houses the score box on the second floor, and concessions and bathrooms on the first floor. It is a simple rectangular masonry block building typical of recreational facilities built in the 1980s. While it lacks architectural embellishments, it presents a large canvas for the placement of a mural.

Mural Summary

Logan City desires to commission a mural that highlights the strong recreational history of the community, and particularly the uses and open spaces at the sports complex and the greater Willow Park area.
